Resigns for Douglas VP New Post

Resignation of Edward H. Heinemann as a Vice President of the Douglas Aircraft Company to accept a high executive position elsewhere in industry, was announced this week by President Donald W. Douglas, Jr.

Heinemann will be available for technical consultations to Douglas, particularly in the field of combat aircraft where his knowledge and long experience will benefit a number of existing Douglas programs, and not be in conflict with his new assignment.

"WE REGRET losing Ed Heinemann," President Douglas said, "but we wish him, in his new assignment, all the success he so well deserves. We are pleased that his talents will continue to be available to us on a consulting basis."

Details of Heinemann's new position were not revealed, but an announcement is expected in the near future.

Heinemann is best known for his part in the design and development for Douglas of a long series of distinguished Navy planes, the latest of which is the A4D midget attack bomber.

Women Advised Of Opportunity In Air Force

Young women should formulate carefully plans for the future and choose a career that will provide satisfaction to themselves and great value to their community and nation. This is the advice of T/Sgt. Duane K. Hetler, local Air Force Recruiter, who advises that there are over 500 different job opportunities available in the Air Force.

Women of the Air Force (WAF) handle highly technical and important operations. Among the fields they work in are intelligence, photomapping, air traffic control and warning, flight hostess, radio and radar maintenance, budgeting and accounting, and machine accounting.

Requirements for enlisting include young women being between the ages of 18 and 27, unmarried and high school graduates or having successfully completed a general education development test.

Further information may be obtained at the Air Force Recruiting Office at 1319 1/2 Sartori Ave., or by calling FAIR-fax 8-1404.

Rector Holds Pre-Marriage Counseling

Before couples are married at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Torrance, they participate in three sessions of Marriage Counseling, conducted by the rector, the Rev. Hugh R. Percy.

The sessions, which are conducted privately—not as part of a class—embrace the physiological, economic, and spiritual aspects of Holy Matrimony. The rector wishes to call this service to the attention of any parishioners contemplating marriage.

The topic of the sermon for Sunday at the 9:15 a.m. and 11 a.m. services is "Receiving Good Things." It concerns the necessity for Christians to learn to recognize the good that is sent to us, and to use it wisely. It is not uncommon, states Father Percy, for many of us even to reject, perhaps unknowingly, the good, and receive the mediocre or spurious.

All parishioners are advised that the rector's vacation will take place during the month of August. The Rev. Fr. Lee C. Mills of Christ Church, Redondo will be celebrant at all services of Holy Communion on Sundays at 7:30 a.m., Thursdays at 11 a.m. and on Holy Days at 6:30 a.m. during the month.

Other services will be conducted by Lay Readers, Messrs. Arthur Kinsey, Frank Simcik, and Garth Belknap.

Revival Now In Progress

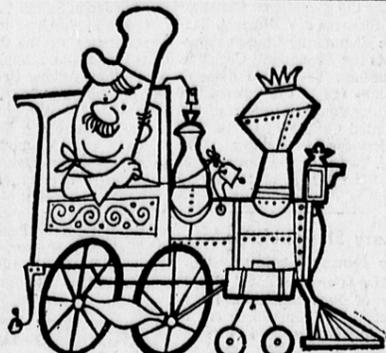

Evangelist Jimmy Mayo, Jr., from Atlanta, Ga., is holding Revival meetings nightly, except Saturday, at 7:30 p.m. The meetings began Tuesday evening and will continue through Sunday, Aug. 7.

Revival meetings will be held at Harbor Tabernacle, Anaheim St. at Belleporte Ave., Harbor City. Rev. Mayo is a young man, who preaches the Bible, draws chalk artistry, and is an accomplished musician.

Travelling with the Rev. Mr. Mayo is "Jerry," the talking doll. "Jerry" will also preach through his ventriloquist, Rev. Mayo.

Meetings are for two weeks only, and all will be welcomed.
